

'Louise Bourgeois in 1992 said';
'Reality changes with each new angle.
Mirrors can be seen as a vanity, but that is not all their meaning. The act of looking into a mirror is really about having the courage it takes to look at yourself and really face yourself'.

Louise Bourgeois (Eye and Mirror).

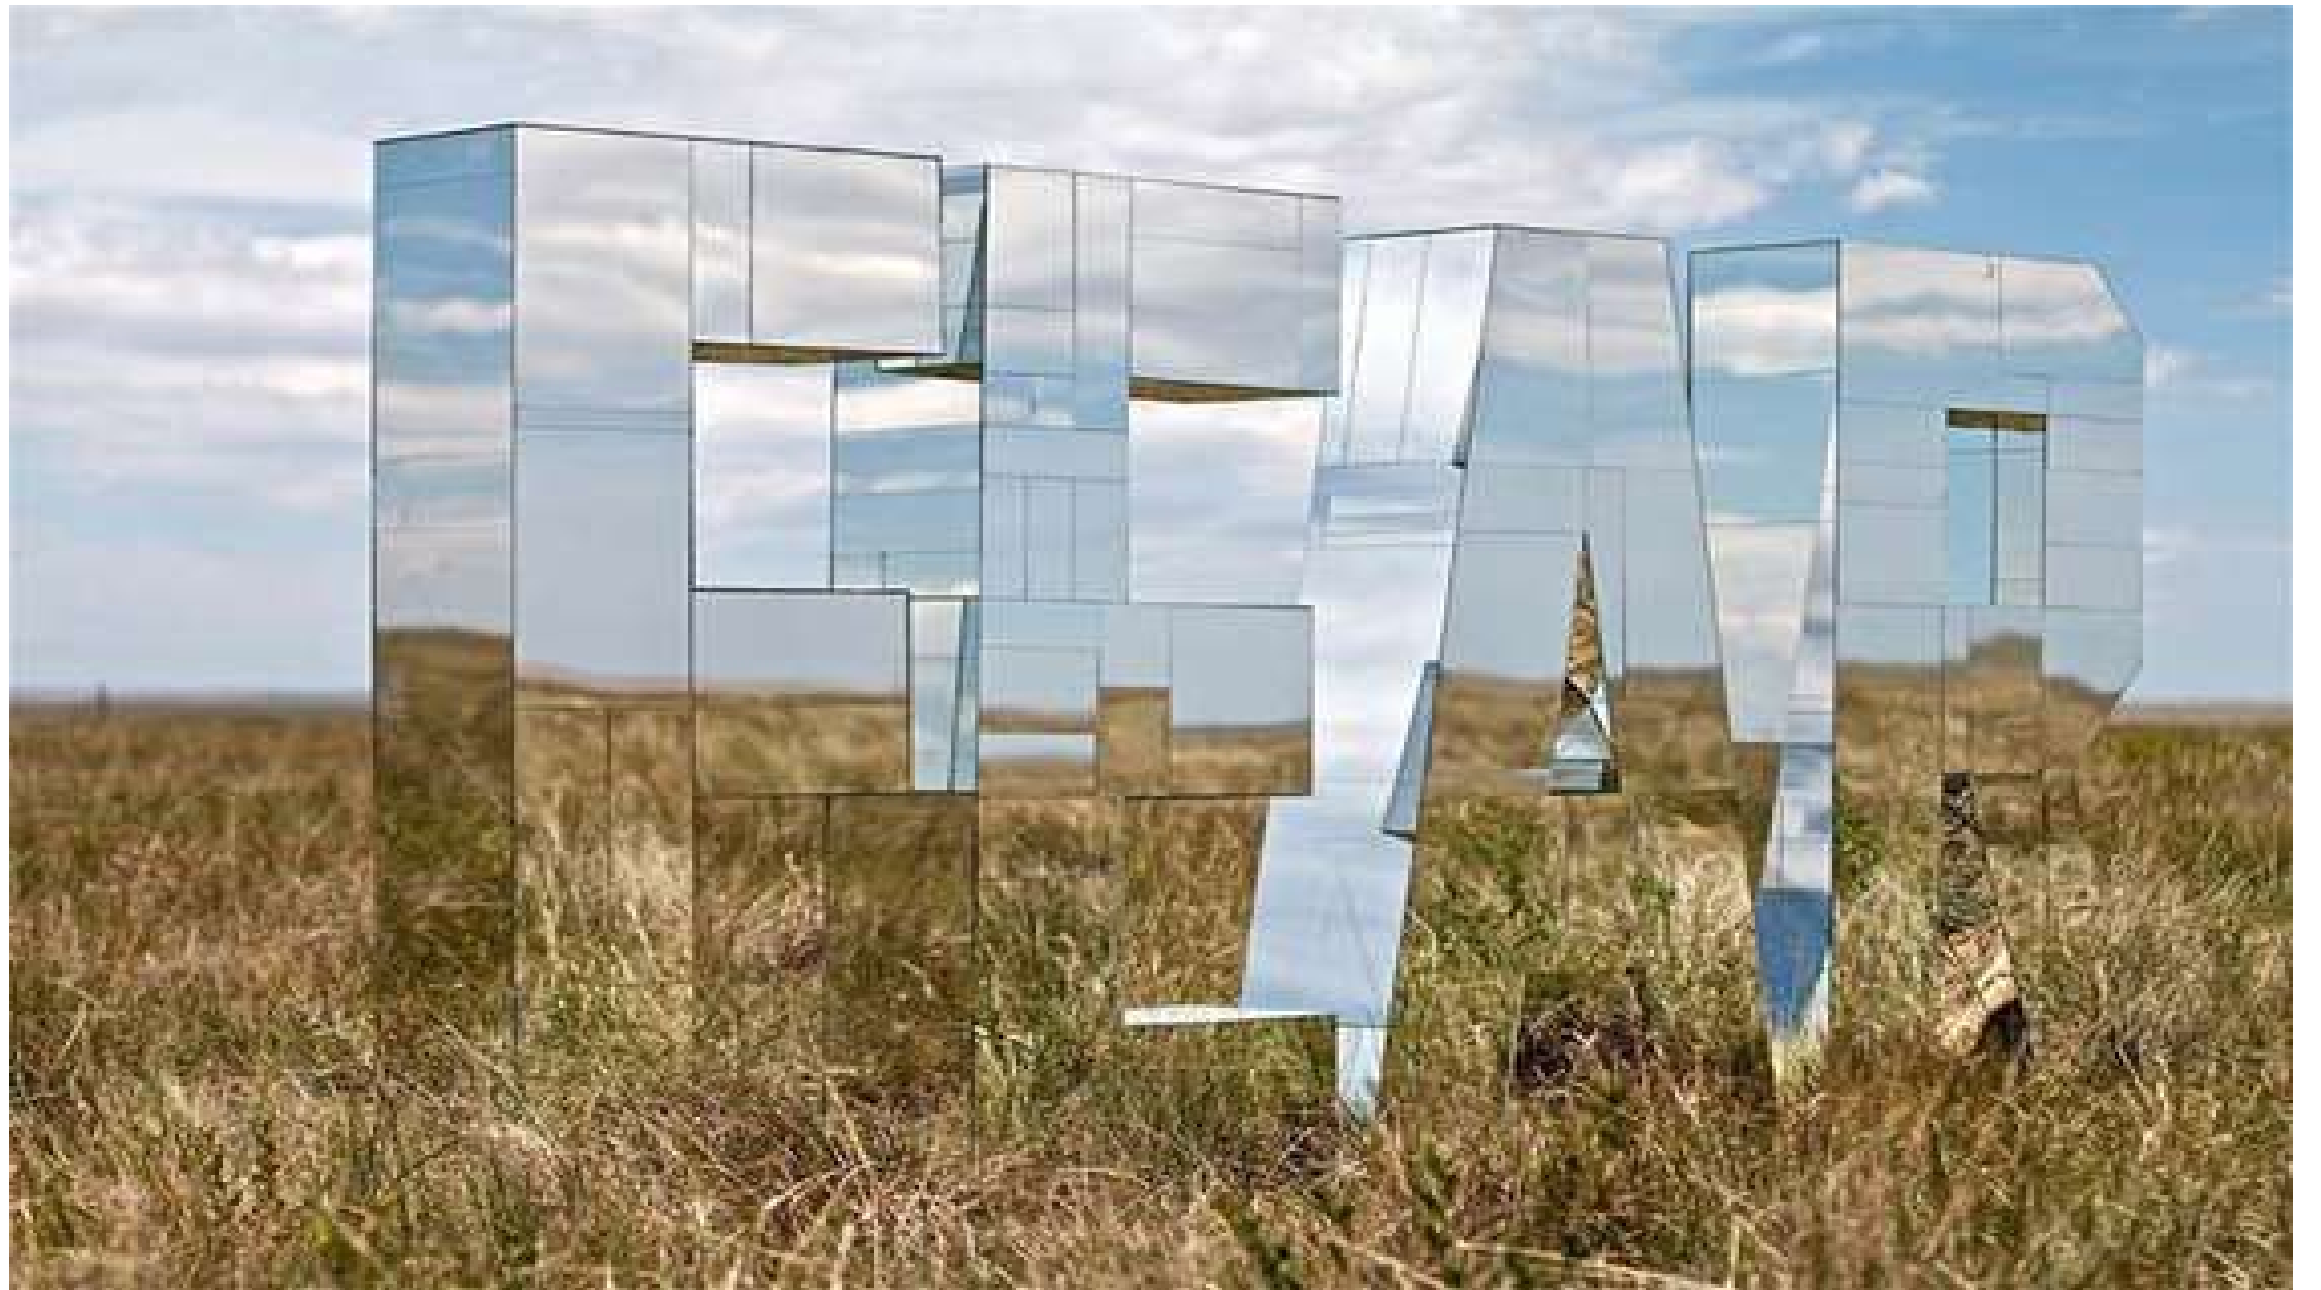

Larry Bell

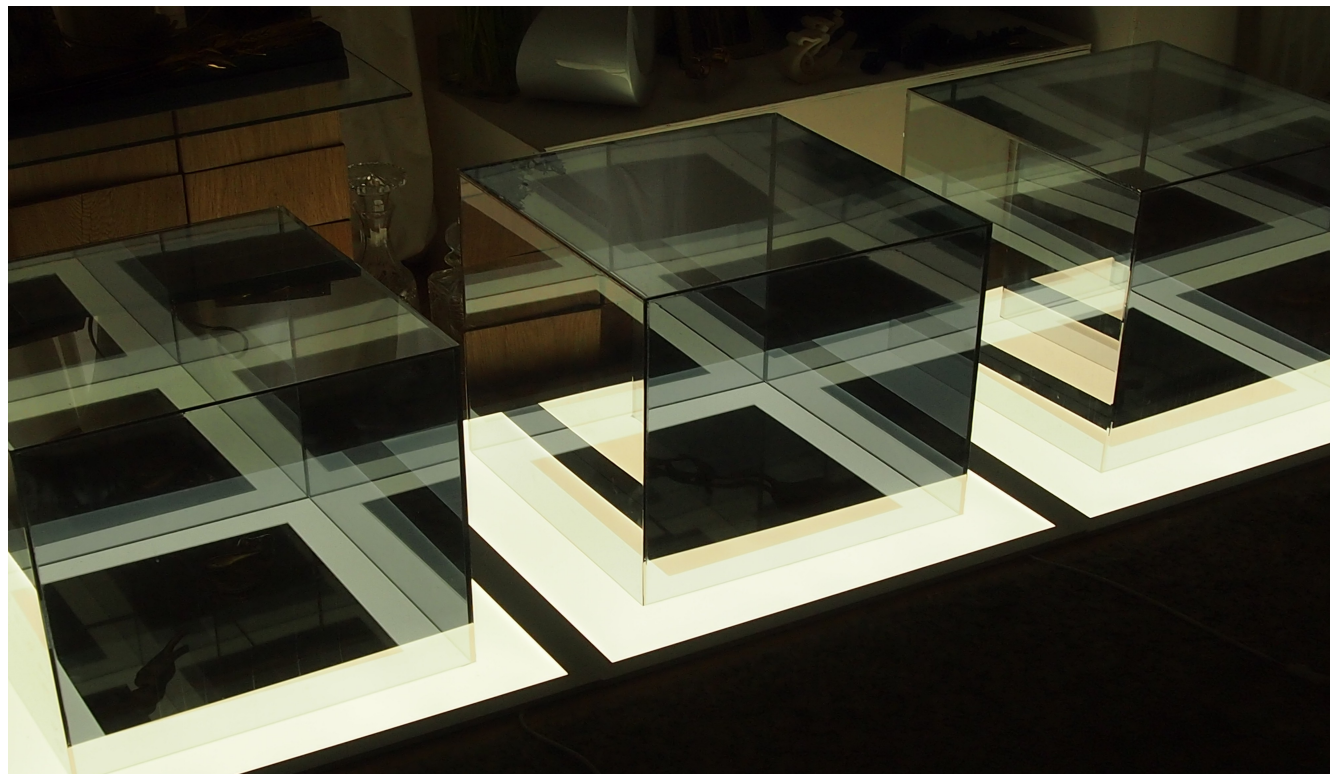

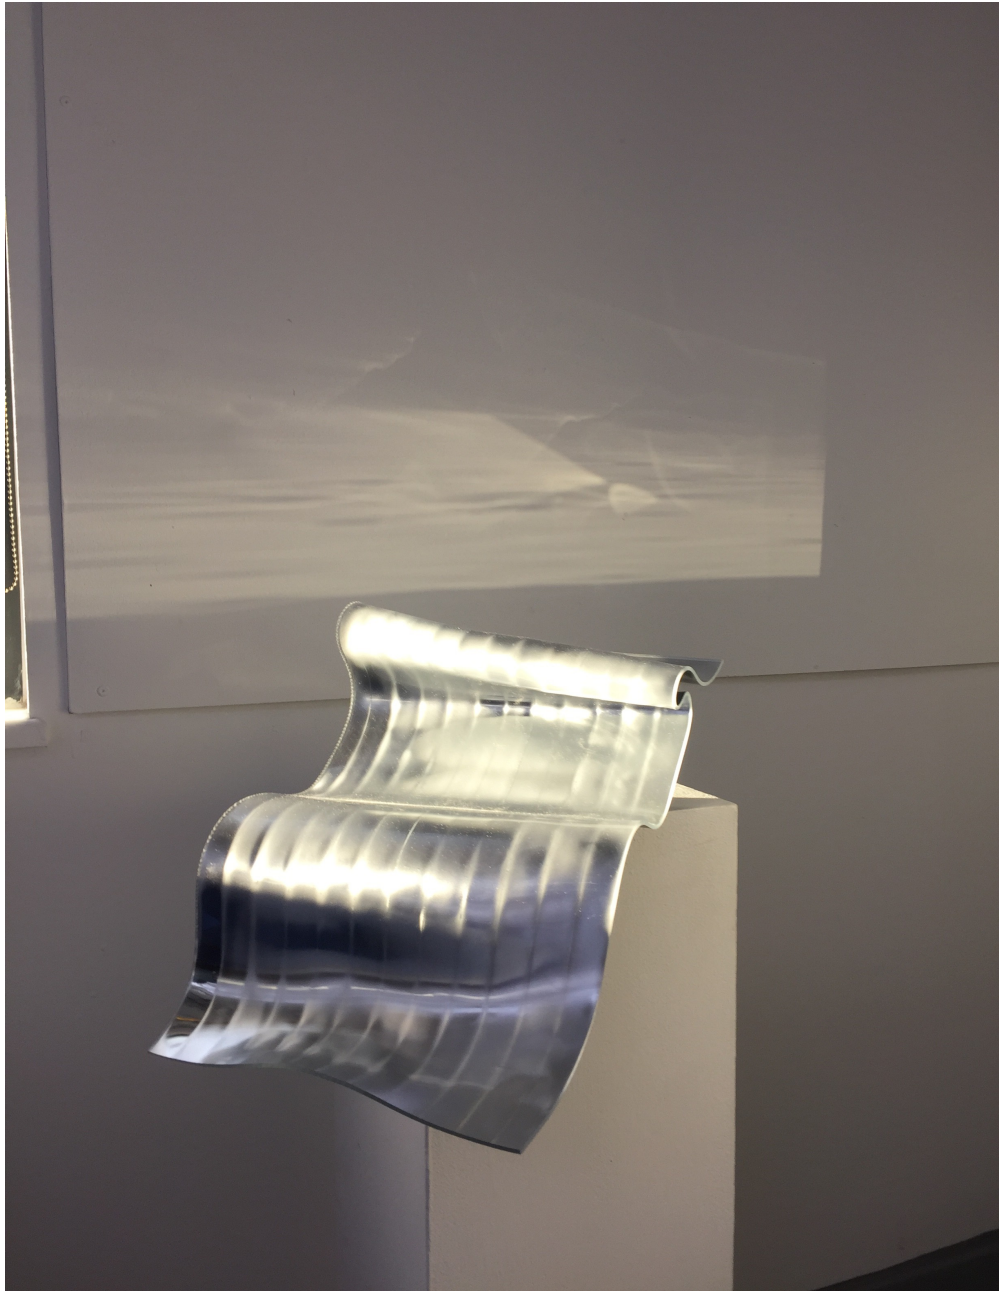

Dan Graham

A place between form and formlessness; a time between origin and becoming, an unknown trajectory to an infinite destination.

Encouraging the movements, interactions, and engagements
between my audiences and my artworks within the space existed outside or inside their heads.

I'm interested to re-invent ordinary materials and transform them into emotional pieces that capture a mood usually presented in the form of abstracted symbolism.

Andre Kertesz Distortions Photography

<https://youtu.be/iR9qLI2n-y0>

Female Space

Art Performance

<https://youtu.be/b4W33Lg4RGk>